The miners, who have been striking for seven weeks, voted 96 percent in favor of accepting a substantial pay increase of up to $15.60 a week. Their leaders-said that the men will return to Work as acon as possible and thatmost pits will be in production by Monday.

Blackouts in homes, however, will continue for another two or three weeks until coal-fired genereters replenish stocks. But the restrictions limiting the use of electricity by industry will be eased beginning Sunday night.

Besides power cuts in homes of up to nine hours a day, tha strike also resulted in temporary suspension of more than 15 million workers, whose factories were ordered to operate only three days a week. While these industrial curbs will be lifted over the weekend, the factories will be urged to limit their use of electricity to 85 percent of

From Earth, a Message for Alien Beings

By Thomas O'Toole WASHINGTON, Feb. 25

(WP).-The first spacecraft to fly out of the solar system carries a greeting from earth for an alien civilization.

The spacecraft is the Pioneer launched from Cape Kennedy Sunday night on a mission to Jupiter. Pioneer will swing by that planet on its way into the cosmos, where there is a remote chance it might be recognized as an artificial body and intercepted by an intelligent and advanced civilization.

Pioneer's greeting is engraved on a plaque fixed to the space-erait's antenna support struts.

Nixon and Chou Stress Differences in Toasts

Last Peking Banquet

PEKING, Feb. 25 (NYT).-A cordial but relatively restrained banquet closed the major phase of President Nixon's meetings with Premier Chou En-lai here tonight. The two men then headed for a weekend visit to Hang-chow and Shanghai, still guarding the secrets of their extensive discussions behind a flourish of metaphor.

While Mr. Nixon stressed a desire for more unofficial contacts between Chinese and Americans, Mr. Chou emphasized a prior interest in normal state relations. The issue of Taiwan is known to stand in the way of such normal diplomatic relations. but it was unclear to what extent the Chinese leader saw it also as an obstacle to informal government dealings and unofficial exchanges of people and goods.

Wall as Symbol

Mr, Nixon in his toast, seized on the symbolism of the Great Wall of China, asserting that the meetings "have begun the long process of removing" the wall between the two countries. He spoke of the talks as a beginning, saying nothing more about the prospects for future contacts and merely relterating the belief that he brought to China that both nations share an interest in peace and building . Chinese Learn That 'Smoking

FERING, Feb. 25,—It took President Nixon to bring an anti-smeking campaign to China.

Prominently displayed on every table at the banquet Mr. Nixon gave last night were packs of American cigarettes bearing the presidential seal and the standard warning from the U.S. surgeou-general that "smoking is dangerous to your healh."

The Chinese studied the warning with curiosity, but there is little likelihood of the warning persuading Chinese leaders to start a campaign of their own

Senate Votes, 43 to 40, to Bar Courts From Issuing School Bus Orders

By Robert Siner WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (IHT). -The Senste today voted to bar federal courts from ordering busing of school children to effect racial integration.

The action came in a 43-to-40 vote on an amendment to the education bill proposed by Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R., Mich.

The amendment, which was the strongest congressional ex-pression to date on the politi-cally volatile busing issue would also prohibit federal officials elso prohibit federal officials from withholding or threatening to withhold any government funds to force a local school district to accept a busing pro-gram to achieve integration.

Opponents of the measure declared it would spel the end of the present desegregation effort and would smound to a repeal of the section of the 1964 repeal of the section of the 1964 of the 1964 of the control of the 1964 of the control of the 1964 of itamentary situation, it is pos-sible that the vote could be re-rersed next week.

This situation stems from the fact that the Griffin amendment is technically an amendment to an amendment offered to the higher education bill by Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D., Minn. The vote on the Mondale amendment comes Monday, and if it is de-feated, all amendments to it will also automatically be defeated. leaving the Senate back where it started on the busing issue.

His appeal apparently remains from the days when he was the leading advocate of civil rights legislation in the Senate.

When Mr. Lindsay became a Democrat and then a Democratic candidate the tremore ran through Ben. McGovern's campaign headquarters. With his television talent and a vast pool of money, some feared, Mr. Lindsay would simply abduct the McGovern constituency.

But even McGovern campaign directors tend to scree now with Mr. Lindsay'e manager, Richard. Aurelio, that the mayor and the senator attract substantially different kinds of people.

The Aurelio thesis is that Mr.

There is even some reason to believe that Gov. Wallace is alightly more popular among college students than he is with the general population. One poll says he wins 16 percent of the college student vote as compared with his usual 13 percent of the total electorate.

West Germans In Fog Incident

Feb. 24 (AP).—Two West German soldiers who drove their army truck into East Germany in thick fog Wednesday have been returned, West German customs officials said yesterday. A spokesman added that the pair told authorities they lost their way en route from their garrison in Westphalia, drove through the open barriers on West German territory and suddenly found themselves stopped by East German police.

Both were questioned by the East Germans for several hours and then released. They arrived back aboard a civilian truck from West Berlin, the spokesman said. Their army truck was confiscated by the East Germans, he added.

Debate Ended In Bundestag On East Pacts

No Test of Strength; Treaties Go to Panels

By John M. Goshko BONN, Feb. 25 (WP).—The Bundestag today ended its first round of debate over ratification of Chancellor Willy Brandt's goodwill treaties with the Soviet Union and Poland by sending them to committee without a This decision by the lower house of parliament concluded three days of sharply partisan debate on a note of distinct anticlimar. The treaties, aimed at resolving cold war issues, are the basis of Mr. Brandt's attempt to improve relations with Commu-nist Eastern Europe. A procedural vote on whether to refer them to committee would have marked the first formal test of strength between their partisans and opponents in the Bundestag. For this reason, the vote had been anticipated anxiously by political observers seeking to gauge the strengths of the contesting factions.

Simple Majority Mr. Brandt's government coalition has 251 seats in the Bundes-tag against 245 held by the opposition Christian Democrats. As a result, there was little doubt that the government would have been able to muster the simple majority necessary for reterral.

However, a vote today might have provided some clues as to whether any coelition deputies with doubts about the treaties planned to abstain. This is important because the Christian Democrats made plain during this week's debate that they will vote as a bloc in opposition.

Depending on what position the upper house, the Bundesrat, eventually takes on the treaties, the government could find that it can win ratification on the final vote only by getting an absolute majority of 249 in the Bundestag. For this season, any indication of how many potential defectors there are in the coelition is of keen interest here.

No Test of Strength However, shortly before the end of today's debate, leaders of the two sides agreed to sidestep a test of strength at this time by waiving the referral vote.

In order to do this, a compromise was worked out to resolve the Christian Democrats' demand that the treaties be considered by the Committee on Inner-German Affairs as well as the Foreign Affairs and Legal Committees.

The compromise calls for the Legal and Foreign Affairs Com-mittees to decide among them-selves whether there should also be a referral to the Committee on Inner-German Affairs.
The committee votes, which will deal with both the constitutionality and desirability of ratifying the treaties, are not binding After the committees have given their opinions, the full Bundestag will hold another hearing in May and, following consideration by the Bundesrat, the final vote in

RFE Reports It Can Meet Payroll For Next Week

Funding for another govern-ment-subsidized station based in Munich, Radio Liberty, also expired Tuesday. A joint House-Senate committee refused to accept a recommendation that the subsidy be extended through June 30. A spokesman for Radio Liberty was not available for comment. Sen. J. William Fulbright, D., Ark., and some members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee have opposed continuation of RFE and Radio Liberty, which broadcast to the Soviet Union and Sast European nations.

Dollar Troubles Again

to devalue the dollar formally by raising the price of gold from $35 to $38 an ounce in order to check speculation that much larger devaluation — or international monetary chaos-lies ahead. While the Senate Banking Committee's favorable action on Thursday indicated that Congress will indeed grant the administration's request promptly, it must recognize that this step will not in itself be sufficient to allay fears that the dollar is a weak currency.

The attack on the dollar was touched off by the report that the United States ran a record payments deficit of $30 billion in 1971; though scarcely news, it intensified concern that this country has been following reckless fiscal and monetary policies without regard for the impact on other nations.

Yet the underlying strength of the American position should not be underestimated. The American economy is gradually recovering from recession, while other countries are slowing their rates of growth. There is likely to be a better profits performance on this side of the Atlantic—and eventually, a strong movement of funds to American investment.

With the devaluation of the dollar, the United States' competitive position has improved—and signs of that improvement are likely to become more evident as the year progresses. If the administration makes good its declared intention of maintaining wage-price restraints, inflation here should be less than in other countries. Such factors will, in the two years ahead, strengthen both the U.S. balance of payments and the dollar which is the only basic way of making other governments willing to go on holding tens of billions of dollars.

Secretary of the Treasury Connally and Under-Secretary Volcker are correct in their position that, while the United States remains in sizable payments deficit, it should not attempt a "dash for convertibility." This

The administration is pressing Congress could breed another crisis, as most foreign government officials recognize. In a more moderate way, however, the United States could and should cooperate with the IMF to assist other governments with special needs to convert surplus dollars into other assets, as is the case now with Britain. More basically, a U.S. proposal for the eventual solution to the convertibility problem must be part of the future reform and reconstruction of a stable international monetary sys-

> It will obviously take many months, as Mr. Volcker stressed in his congressional testimony, to negotiate a full-fledged monetary reform. But the United States would help to stabilize international markets if, instead of playing a waiting game-which looks to others like a return to "benign neglect"it took the initiative and proposed measures for achieving limited convertibility of the dollar as well as the basis of a long-run solution, which must deal with the overhang of $50 billion in foreign dollar holdings. Preventing this overhang from becoming a continuous menace to the stability of the monetary system will require either a longterm funding of foreign dollar claims or converting them into a form of truly international reserves, with a guarantee against possible losses that would result from future dollar devaluations.

Lacking such American initiative and cooperation, other governments will take events into their own hands. Their actions may be constructive—as the tentative plan, worked out in Paris, to link Common Market currencies more closely and let them fluctuate against the dollar in response to market forces. Or the result could be destructive, for this country and others, winding up in a host of trade, foreign exchange and capital controls and splitting the world into antagonistic blocs.

Foreign Aid Fiasco

in his long career as chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee dealing with foreign aid, has steadfastly pretended to be the enemy of waste and the champion of the taxpayer. The compromise reached this week by House-Senate conferees on the foreign aid hill demonstrates the fraudulence of his claim.

After the Senate temporarily killed the entire program last October in a surprise vote, it set to work to shift the pattern of foreign aid spending. The Senate objectives : were to invest more in economic development and less in military aid and to diminish American bilateral arrangements in favor of an increased role for international organizations such as the World Bank.

Although the Senate was more tight-fisted with the needy countries than is becoming to the world's richest nation, its efforts to restructure the program were clearly headed in the right direction. Unfortunately, those efforts did not fare very well in the conference committee.

Under the adamant leadership of Mr. Passman, the House conferees insisted on pushing up the spending for military assistance from $350 million to $500 million. Similarly, the so-called "supporting assistance" which goes to countries like South Korea and South Vietnam to help them sustain their military burden went up from the $400 million which the Senate had voted to $550

Rep. Otto Passman, Democrat of Louisiana, . million. Is this what Mr. Passman means by economizing?

> The House appropriated nothing for the American contribution to the World Bank and the derisive sum of $13 million to the Inter-American Bank. These contributions are periodically made by member countries and form the financial back-up for the bonds which these international banks sell to finance their lending. The conference committee split the difference between nothing and adequacy

The same kind of simple-minded arithmetic prevailed with regard to the Peace Corps, which received $72 million, halfway between the higher Senate and the lower House figures. Trivial cuts-trivial except that people may die because of them-were made in humanitarian programs such as

The Senate conferees did not lose on every issue. They did succeed in restoring money for the United Nations Development Fund which the House had eliminated entirely. But, on balance, the conference was a fiasco. Sen. William Proxmire, Democrat of Wisconsin, chairman of the Senate conferees, is right in refusing to sign the conference report. Mr. Passman and his House colleagues have amply demonstrated once again that they conceive of the foreign aid program as an opportunity not to help people in poor countries but to export that familiar American product—the military-and-civilian contractor's pork barrel.

It's the Thought That Counts

Among the insignificant but fascinating details of President Nixon's visit to Peking is the question of how he hit upon a pair of musk oxen as an appropriate present for his host. Indeed, the whole subject of gift exchanges between heads of state might be a fruitful field of inquiry for anyone interested in the trivia of diplomacy, not to mention dissertation writers in search of

Did Dr. Kissinger, having taken soundings, confide to his chief that the Chairman was partial to musk oxen? And did he give his Chinese counterpart a hint that Mr. Nixon might relish a pair of pandas in return?

Or perhaps there are concealed messages in these exchanges, as in the old-fashioned language of flowers. In that case the President's gift of shaggy ruminants may simply have meant something like: the situation is hairy but there's no reason why we can't chew the thing over.

In any event, Mr. Nixon has shown the greatest degree of imagination in this area since the King of Siam sent Abraham Lincoln a white elephant. One can only hope that a century from now "musk ox" will not be Chinese slang for a useless object that can't be disposed of.

Nixon and China Ties

President Nixon knows he is worrying his traditional allies. The major world opposite number of the United States, Russia, which is in turn preparing to receive a U.S. President, does not at all appreciate the support he is bringing Russia's major adversary.

Mr. Nixon is not a man to run so many risks to perfect his knowledge of Chinese cooking. His visit must thus have political content. This content may be apparent or hidden. The apparent aspect will probably include a certain normalization of Sino-American economic relations. As for the hidden side, there is reason to believe that the fate of Taiwan will be thoroughly dis-

Our best was the active head of the university, who got his advanced degree from the University of Chicago in 1936. Humiliation Probed

Cautiously, he probed the circumstances of his and his uni-versity's humiliation, without of course exactly letting on. We know that he knew that we knew that he was reduced to puppetry. Anyway, someone asked what had been the errors of Peking University before the great prole-tarian Cultural Revolution caught up with them, and he said that the errors had been partly his responsibility

What were the errors? Peking University had imitated Moscow University by forgetting the dominant imperative of proletarian politics and lending itself instead to the formation of an elite. Translated, that means Peking University sought academic excellence. How had he learned the nature of his delin-quencies? A "Mao thought propaganda team" came to the university in the fall of 1968 and stayed a whole year. After they left, the governing of the university was put into the hands of a revolutionary council, of which this wretched man, an elderly, distinguished physicist, had become the spokesman, surrounded by mesocephalic peasants who, knowing only how to praise the thoughts of Chairman Mao, need know nothing else, in order to correct the venerable professor.

It is their soup, of course, of course. But it continues to be unfathomable why they let us in on it; how they came to believe that we too have forgotten the role of art, or of learning. Who do they think we are? I have horrible suspicions.

Powers Are Defined

Britain of course has no written constitution, but its Northern Ireland province in effect does. It is the 1920 Government of Ireland Act. in which the British Parliament created the provincial government at Stormont and defined its powers. Stormont, in short, can do nothing unless it can find authority in the 1920 act, just as the United States Congress has to base its laws on specific grants of power in the American Constitution. That was the setting of what Drums of Cyanide Dumped in U.K.

Playground Area NUNEATON, England, Feb. 25 (AP) -Police searched today for a truck driver who dumped 36 drums of cyanide, described as enough to kill a million people, in a derelict brickyard used as a children's playground.

The drums, each marked "poison" and containing more than 100 pounds of sodium cyanide ash, were removed by a vaste-disposal firm on the in-structions of Warwickshire County

"Medical officers have told us there was enough cyanide to wipe out a million people," a police spokesman said

"Presumably, it was industrial waste, but it's unbelievable that anyone could be so crassly stupid as to dump the striff, particularly in a place where-abildren play." "The drims were in an extremely dangerous condition." Nuneaton's chief public health officer said. "Some of the studge had seeped out and dried on the

Killed During Renault Riot Forty Maoists Were Distributing Tracts

Demonstrator

PARIS, Feb. 25 (IHT).—One man was shot and killed and eight plant guards injured today when a group of 40 Maoists battled guards at the Repault automobile works in nearby Boulogne-Billancourt.

It was not clear from conflicting information whether the demonstrator was shot when guards tried to halt the distribution of tracts at a plant gate, and then the demonstrators chased the guards into the plant; or whether the demonstrator was shot when the Maoists, after distributing the tracts, penetrated into the plant.

Witnesses seemed agreed that a man in civilian clothes pulled out a pistol and shot the demonstrator from about three feet

Police said tonight a Renault administrative employee, who was not a plant guard, had been ar-rested. They said the man was alleged to have used his personal pistol in the shooting.

The dead man was identified as Pierre Overney, 23, a former employee at the plant who was dismissed a year ego. A company communique tonight said that he was one of "a group of several dozen persons that, armed with clubs and iron bars, tried to break their way into the plant, but was kept from the shops by the guards."

Prior to the fighting, Mr. Overney and fellow demonstrators, belonging to a Maoist group called the "Renault Fight Committee," had been distributing tracts outside the plant calling for support for other workers discharged recently from Renault. The group also handed out tracts calling for a mass demonstration tonight at the metro station Charonne to "pro-test against the victims of discrimination in France, foreign workers."

Tonight, police detained some stration at Charonne subway, where nine persons were killed by the police during a demonstration ten years ago.

Dance in Paris_

A New Troupe in 2 Lively Programs

By David Stevens

DARIS, Feb. 25 (IRT). - The Théâtre du Silence, the young, mine-member dance company being launched with a four-week stand at the Théatre de la Ville, has a lot going for it—including solid classical training and the benevolent interest of Maurice

But it would be a mistake to try to draw too many conclusions from these diverse facts. The two programs the troupe has mounted here, and which will be repeated through March 11, reveal a lively and intelligent group that already has a strong notion of its collective personality.

One reason is that the com-pany's nucleus has been together for a long time. Jacques Garnier, Brigitte Lefèvre, Richard Duquenoy and some of their colleagues were together at the Paris Opera; but, seeking a freer field of action they created some ballets of their own and presented them on their own time notably at the Avignon Festival, With this experience, and with a handful of their own ballets, the dancers have cut the umbilical cord to the Opera and now are really on their own.

There have been other influences. Garnier has spent some time at Martha Graham's New York school, Bejart's encouragement dates from the staging of some of his works at the Opera and extends to the inclusion of a couple of his pas de deux on. the current programs. That certainly doesn't hurt the box office, but in fact the company's own creations have as little in common with Béjart's flamboyant theatricality as with the Opéra's dustier classicism.

Manifesto Garnier'a "Ils Disent Participer," already seen at Avignon, is the group's "ballet manifesto." It is a kind of triptych that moves from the chaos of nine dancers on their own, cutting over the stage in lines that cross but never meet, through a period of rhyth-mic restraint that imposes a certain common purpose, to a final stage of working closely together. Although a bit long-winded and slow to evolve, it was an attractive expression of the group's

Renaldo Cerqueira's brightly colored geometric backdrops reinforced the ideas of the three sections, and Diego Masson's sonic background of gongs, bells and percussion at least did not get Some of the same progression from disorder to order underlay Brigitte Lefèvre's "Microcosmos," to a group of Bartok's keyboard s. Here it was three dancers feeling their way gradually to a common idea of what they want to do without losing their individual spontaneity. Miss Lefèvre, Garnier and Michael Denard (still a star at the Opera, but joining his ex-colleagues for this program) were attractive and wifty as three who become a trio.

The works being seen for the first time were Garnier'e "Rag-time," which seized on the parodistic element in Stravinsky's score, and "Quintet," by Duquenoy to Prokofley's Opus 39 for strings and winds, in which four couples were inventively used to capture the score's wry wit-and to prove that Prokofiev almost always wrote dance music, even if he did not call it that,

One of two new ballets for the Opera-Comique by Janine Char-rat proved the same thing about Prokoflev in a quite different way. It was "Dyade," an extended nard's youthful ardor were nicely grand pas de deux set to Prokofiev's First Violin Concerto. It proved to be an attractive showsolo violin part. plece, using the whole classical vocabulary, mildly updated. Claire Motte's cool brilliance, and De-with a group of humans in some futuristic world being exterminated like so many insects by beings from another universe. Neither Ivo Malec's music nor the choreography could give this idea the

London Theater

'Macbeth' in an African Setting

By John Walker

LONDON, Feb. 25 (IRT).— Pater Coe's production of "The Black Macbeth," Shakespeare's tragedy transposed to an African tribal setting, with jufu men replacing the usual witches, is both enjoyable and exotic, even if it adds little to understanding and appreciation of the original play.

The emphasis is on blood, with Shakespeare's imagery reinforced by on-stage murders, gory hands, and a gruesome decapitated head of Mbeth, as Macbeth is

The production has an immediste visual and sural impact with drumming, stamping feet, strange chants, grotesque masks, nodding phimes, and ju-ju rituals, although it is lessened by Mr. Coe's habit of darkening the stage so that asides and soliloquies can be delivered under a single spotlight. (A similar trick helped spoil the Prospect produc-tion of "Hamlet," with Lan Me-

Kellen, last year) The African locale works well

anough, although it has led to some drastic cutting of the text and some rewriting that has a ridiculous sound. I treasure the absurd memory of both Mbeth's revised curse: "The devil damn thee white, though dark-faced loon," and his final cry of "Lay on, Mashasha" to the renamed Macduif.

What is particularly effective is the distance that is suggested between Mbeth, a traditional figure in a loincloth, armed with spear and shield, and Meru (Malcolm), who is a modern perstrality, wearing dark glasses and battledress and carrying a gun. He is played with cool authority by Jeffery Kissoon.

Two Ways of Life This contrast between ways of life is also evident in the scene where Mbeth seeks help for his wife from the do another modern figure who is offhand and uninvolved in the monstrous world that Mbeth inhabits.

It makes Mbeth's tragedy seem that of a man who is unable to come to terms with reality and clings to outmoded ways, who has become suddenly trrelevant and despite his striving for authority. unimportant. Fittingly, the death is less due to Mashasha's superiority in a thrilling spear fight than to the intervention of the ju-ju men, those other figures of savage superstition.

In another context, the acting would seem melodramatic. Indeed, apart from Neville Aurelius's Bwandi (Banque), most of the players rant and shout and brutally murier the verse. Oscar James, as Mheth, is much given to overexcitement, though effective enough in his quieter moments and in his final sudden sentility. Mona Hammond, as his wife, makes a strong impression, though she, too, gives way to extremes in her alcep-walking

A power cut abruptly ended my enjoyment of the triple bill of Peter Handke's plays at The Almost Free Theatre, although I had seen enough to appreciate that, once again, the Other Company under the sensitive di-rection of Naftali Yavin has warmed into life what appears in print to be dead exercises in the demolition of language and the reduction of theatrical means. A Gala Triumph for Fonteyn and Nureyev Dance in London:

By Oleg Kerensky

LONDON, Feb. 25 (TRT).—When the dancers of the Royal Ballet's touring section offered to put on a gala in aid of Sadler's Wells Theatre (where they are now appearing), at less than a week's notice, the idea seemed hopelessly impractical. But the need for money is so urgent that they were allowed to have a try and last night they proved how well it could be done. The theater was sold out for a midnight program, with prices ranging up to £10. Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon were there to give an extra sense of occasion in the suditorium, while Dame Margot Fonteyn and Rudolf Nureyev, with other Covent Garden stars, added luster to the proceedings on the stage.

Sadier's Wells was of course the cradle of what the Royal Ballet has become; nowadays it is a permanent home for visiting ballet and opera companies, both British and foreign. As such it gets no government grant. Not all the visiting companies stay long enough to build up an audience. The theater has been losing about £20,000 a year and recently the governors amounced that it would have to close unless more money was found. An appeal fund was launched, 230,000 has already been sub-scribed, and last night's gala probably raised another £7,500.

It was a happily nostalgic co-casion for many in the audience, and presumably for Fonteyn, who started her career at Sadier's Wells, and for Dame Ninette de Valois, who was in the audience to applied the latest generation of the company she founded. It seems a pity that Sir Frederick Ashton was not invited to be present and take a curtain call after his "Les Rendezyons," a delighful work dating from 1933

Nureyey, who had only danced "Les Randezvous" once before (at a previous gala), was at his simplest and bounciest in the lead, which was all the more re-markable as he had danced both "Pield Figures" and "Afternoon of a Faun" at Covent Garden earlier in the evening. Merla Park not only scintillated with him but also appeared with Desmend Kelly in Peter Wright's Bolshoi-type "Mirror Walkers" pas de deux, which looks as if it will become a regular party

The highlight of the gala was the appearance of Fonteyn and Anthony Dowell in "Le Spectre pas de deux has not been in the Royal Ballet repertoire for years, and Dowell learned it for the occasion. He danced well, but without the special virtuosity or feeling which would doubtless come with further performances.

It was Fonteyn who made us realize why "Spectre" had such impact when it was danced by Karsavina and Nijinsky 60 years ago. Not since I saw Karsavina herself explaining and miming the opening scene have I been moved by it, until last night; as Ponteyn stood by the open window she really did seem to be lost in memories, when she sank into a chair she did appear to be in a dream, and she managed to maintain this feeling, keeping her eyes almost closed, when dancing with Dowell. By now, one should have stopped being amazed by Fonteyn's perpetual youthfulness, but one cannot stop being amazed by her stylistic range. The contented happiness she showed at the end of "Spec-tre" is akin to, yet quite different from, the happy resigna-tion she had shown at the end of "Poème de l'Extase" at Covent Garden earlier in the evening. The gala ended with Joe Layton's Noel Coward ballet, "The

The Art Market Higher Prices for 'Minor' Drawings

By Souren Melikian PARIS, Feb. 25 (IHT).—Of all the blue-chip investments in art in the last five years, none has been safer than old-master

From 1967 until recently, the rising prices applied only to works by great masters. But at an auction Wednesday, the works of minur masters were very expen-sive, bringing as much as three times the initial estimates. The suction was conducted by Bernard Oger, assisted by Alexandre Ansnoff (or Ananiah, as he is mown to his Armenian compatriots) at the Hotel Drouot.

The 71 drawings, mostly by 17th and 18th-century French artists, all came from a single collection. The majority had been bought at an important sale. in April, 1900, also at Drouot, when the collection of the Marquis de Chennevières was auc-

The sale started with a portrait attributed to Louis-Léopoid Boilly (1761-1845) who is mostly appreciated for his earlier work. The portrait in crayon; conventionally sentimental, rose to 2,320 francs, which I consider far too much for a work bearing only resemblance to Boilly's style. Next came a good drawing of a monk, in crayon and white chalk on olive paper. Religious subjects of this sort are usually unsalable. The attribution in the catalogue to Boulogue was cau-tions and rightly so. The price of 1,044 francs struck me as unbelievably high.

Daret Drawings The first interesting lots were a series of drawings in colored or black crayon by an obscure 17th-century artist, Jean Daret, who died in Aix-en-Proyence in 1668. Only a handful of connoisseurs know his name, yet he was one of the masters of the Louis XIV school. A sketch of a kneeling man, 23 by 15 centimeters, made 986 francs, a small sum for such a work. But it was one of those religious subjects

Slave Statues

To be seen in the drawing are the four statues of slaves that stood against the pedestal when it was erected in 1686. The statues were later removed and now flank the Louis XIV monument in the Hôtel des Invalides.

The most smissing moment in the auction came when collectors started bidding for an anonymous watercolor study of boiserie (wood paneling). As the lot was knocked down at 2,550 franca, two voices shouted: "Preemption." Apperently the Muste de Chantilly won out over the Biblio-theque Forney. The affair suggested such a lack of communicacrayon, showing a ceiling, quick-ly rose to 1,850 francs. As the auctioneer's hammer banged tion between two state institutions that it set the whole room laughing. It was equally amusing to see a museum curator bidding against the representative of the Bibliothèque Forney, each obviously unaware of what his colleague was doing.

Museums were not, however, the only bidders. A very small watercolor, considered to be by Adam Frans van der Meulen, the Flemish-born French master, made more than twice the price of the watercolor for which the two museums had been bidding.

A whacking 6,080 francs was paid primarily because the drawing was an accurate view of St. Martin's Church in Courtral, Belgium. Doubtless it will eventually turn up on the Belgian market and make at least twice again the Drouot price.

Leaving documentary and his-torical interests aside, there were two valuable lots in this minor sale that would have justified a trip to France. The first was a series of 18 drawings in pen and wash by Pierre-Paul Sevin, a follower of Jacques Callot. While lacking his master's genius Sevin was a great draftsman. I don't remember seeing a comparable sequence in such superb condition at an auction in the last 10 or 12 years. A representative of the National Museum in Stockholm, which owns a similar set, had come to the sale to see whether his museum owned the better of the two, but well-in-formed sources say the Drouot set appears to be the finer. Two dealers, both known for their eve. started bidding and had soon left others behind. The set finally went to the Galeria de l'Oeil, for it was one of the best buye in the The real coup was made by a young dealer, who insists on anonymity, when a strange crayon drawing (31 by 46 centimeters) came up for sale. It showed friars perched on the branch of a tree, their arms above their heads. They were apparently mourning the death of Christ, who, in the drawing, is crucified on the tree, or possibly invoking the Holy Spirit, represented by The work was labeled

Paintings, Drawings and a Nell Gwynne Show

Although Hurry could be called a Suffolk landscape artist it would not do justice to his individual manner. Undertones of English romanticism and Eurocean surrealism have always existed in his work, including that for the theater and ballet. These undertones are strong in this exhibition of acrylic and ink work in which a flower, a church, a moon, sometimes moon and sun together, are superimposed on the Suffolk landscape. ...

Bouvier de Cachard, The Mall Galleries, The Mall, London SW1, to March 7.

Bouvier de Cachard has derable reputation in his native France, as well as in Italy and the United States. This is his first major exhibition in England. His work, figurative but with mythological and emblematic overtones, has some spiritual affinity relationship to that of Graham Sutherland. But his ideas are more emotional than spiritual strength in his work.

His sculpture (portraits and extraordinary figures), his city-scapes (especially those of Venice), his brilliant draftsmanship combine to make him a major and impressive talent.

Schiller Says Bonn, Bank Made a Deal

Savs Credit Moves Show Concerted Action

BONN, Feb. 25 (Reuters).—The one-point bank rate cut decided by the West German Bundesbank yesterday and the government's assurance that it will curb corporate borrowing abroad represent a deal between Boun and Frank-furt, Economics Minister Earl Schiller said today, These measures will have an

These measures will have an effect on foreign exchange markets and demonstrate that the government and the Bundesbank are acting in concert, he added.

Mr. Schiller declared that the government and the Bundesbank will defend the new central rates and will not destroy the fragile attracture of the Washington realignment by departing from free market principles. Speaking at the annual meeting of the German association of chambers of commerce, Mr. Schiller said the credit moves are fully in line with free-market

Inflow Stemmed These credit changes should airably cut the interest rate differential between German and foreign money markets. "A major attraction for placing hot money in Germany has thus been re-moved," he said.

The use of the governments.

powers to curb foreign borrowing by German companies is both a response to, and an example for, Common Market countries seeking ways of warding off excessive capital inflows, Mr. Schiller said. Referring to the recent Franco-German 'agreement on further moves toward community eco-nomic and monetary union, Mr. Schiller again insisted on the principle of parallel progress on economic and monetary coordi-

The two sides achieved farreaching agreement on how far parity bands should be narrowed for community currences and on the application of foreign ex-change market intervention mechanisms.

Watney Gets 89% Of IDV Shares

LONDON, Feb. 25 (AP-DJ) .- He noted that Daimler-Benz and Watney Manin Ltd. said today its offer for shares of International Distillers & Vintners Ltd. (IDV) that it did not already own has brought it ownership of 89.09 percent of IDV's ordinary capital. Prior to the offer last month, Watney owned 37.6 percent of IDV's shares, Watney said the offer has become unconditional and is being extended until further notice. The cash alternative to the share offer was accepted by 1 percent of the shares eligible and now has closed.

Earlier today Watney shareholders approved the issue of 42,207,398 new shares to facilitate the takeover offer.

Alcoa to Sign Pact With Greece

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

The Greek government says an agreement with Aluminum Corp. of America (Alcoa) will be signed soon on construction of a multimilion-dollar aluminum plant near Athens, Deputy Pra-mier Nicholas Makarezos says the state will hold a 33 percent interest in the venture. When in full operation the plant would have capacity to produce 30,000 tons of alumina and 150,000 tons of alumina and 150,000 tons of aluminum annually. In Pitteburgh Aleoa said negotiations are continuing with the Greek government and an agreement is not imminent. But a spokesman emphasized that the project is not in any jeopardy.

Oil Found in Hungarian City

Oil has been struck within the city limits-of the south Hungarian city of Szeged, the Hungarian news agency reports. Engineers are making tests to see whether the deposits are large enough to warrant commercial exploitation. Szeged.
which has a population of some 120,000, was known to be close to the Algyoe fields, which annually produce one million tons of oil and natural gas, but the find within city limits came as a surprise to engineers.

Barclays Seen in U.S. Bank Bid Barclays, the largest bank in Britain and one of the largest banks in the world, has emerged as the leading contender to purchase the $1 hillion First Western Bank & Trust Co. of Los Angeles, well-informed Wall Street officials report.
World Airways, which owns practically all of First

Western's stock, has a deal to sell the bank to Wells Fargo Bank for $95 million in cash and notes. But this acquisition has been attacked by the Justice Department on anti-trust grounds and is expected to be called off formally soon. Douglas Wray, president of Barclays Bank California, says: "No hid has been made, and therefore we have no comment at this stage." we have no comment at this stage." ICI to Build Pilot Protein Plant Inperial Chemical Inductries (ICI) plans to build a pilot plant capable of producing up to 1,000 tons of high-quality protein annually for animal feedstuffs from North Sea gas, an ICI spokesman says. The plant is expected to come into full operation early next year, and if the process fulfills its promise, ICI expects to build its first commercial plant of at least 50,000 to 60,000 tons a year in the mid-1870s.

Study Downgrades Oil Shale Outlook Synthetic crude oil production from U.S. oil shale deposits probably will not exceed 400,000 barrels daily by 1985, could be much lower than that and probably would have to bring $435 a barrel to $530 a barrel at the plant to prove economic. Those are the somewhat pessimistic conclusions in a 122-page initial report by the oil shale task group of the National Petroleum Council, which is studying all U.S. energy resources for the Interior Department. U.S. refineries consume more than 11 million barrels of crude oil daily. and crude oil currently sells for about $3.40 a

Three German Auto Firms Reportedly Discuss Merger

FRANKFURT, Feb. 25 (AP-DJ) .- The formation of Deutsche Auto-Union, a giant West Ger-man national automobile con-Cern. comprising Volkswagen, Daimler-Benz and Bayerische Motoren Werke (BMW) is being actively discussed by major chareholders with the knowledge of Bona politicians, the West German monthly business magazine Capital said today.

It is intended, said Capital, to manage the three companies through a holding unit and to coordinate the companies model policies and capital spending. With annual sales of about 33 billion deutsche marks ($10,3 billion), the magazine said, such a company would rank as the world's third largest auto maker behind General Motors and Ford.

The magazine claimed that the possible merger "currently is a well-kept secret among a handful of managers." Denials by Firms

At Wolfsburg, a VW spokesman sald he knew nothing of any such talks. "Speculation in that direc-tion isn't exactly new," he said. VW are cooperating m. Spain Indonesia and South Africa and are "on friendly terms" at home. The spokesman also emphasized that directly or indirectly, the Bonn government and the state of Lower Saxony hold 40 percent of Volkswagen's stock and, through limitations on independent shareholder voting rights, in fact have an 80 per-cent control over West Ger-many's largest motor company.

"I can't see the government and state abandoning their control over Volkswagen," he said.

In Stuttgart, a Daimler-Benz spokesman termed the Capital report "highly speculative." He emphasized, however, Daimler-Benz is open to cooperation and that existing cooperation with the other may be intensified. Daimler-Benz is controlled by industrialist Friedrich Flick, Deutsche Bank and industrialist Herbert Quandt, who, in turn, has a controling interest in

Mr. Plick's stake in Daimler-Benz is 40 percent, that of Deutsche Bank about 26 percent and Mr. Quandt's about 16 percent. Well-placed insiders said. Mr. Flick is unlikely to abandon his strong position in Daimler-Benz without receiving a say in Volkswagen, which VW's current voting structure excludes.

Capital said old plans for linking West Germany's auto companies have been taken off the shelf after VW chairman Kurt Lotz was replaced last autumn by Rudolf Leiding. Capital sald Mr. Flick, Mr.

Joachim Zahn and Deutsche Bank's supervisory board chairman Hermann J. Abs are backing plans for forming Deutsche Auto-Union to jointly manage the three car firms.

West German anto makers are threatened this year with a profit crisis following predictions of a 15 percent production decline for the current year from

Uruguay and Yugoslavia. The ceremony culminated nearly five-year effort started on Indian initiative after the 1967 Kennedy Round pact for worldwide tariff cuts that had failed to satisfy the developing world. The 16-nation agreement has the blessing of all member states of the GATT but the United States. To help the poorer world's export trade the advanced nations agreed to waive besic GATT rules for developing countries. When the 55-nation GATT council approved the new pact last November the United States opposed it. In the U.S. view the pact is yet another form of trade preferences whose long-range effort is likely to invalidate the basic GATT rules that helped lead a war-torn Western world back to prosperity.

One of the measures of the pile-up of dollars abroad—the amount of government securities held by the Fed in custody for foreign and international accounts—rose by $590 million in the week ended Wednesday. This was the biggest increase since the week ended Dec. 22, which includ-ed the so-called interim Smithsonian monetary agreements.

Too Much Spur "It now appears that the administration is becoming concerned that the Fed may have gone too far" in spurring lower shortterm rates, Robert B. Johnson of Palne, Webber, Jackson & Curtis

This, in turn, has proved a major reason why foreigners have not found it attractive to send their dollar build-ups back to the United States. Low rates com-bined with "Europeans' concern over U.S. economic policies," Mr. Johnson said, could cause the agreement to become "ungined."

"This is why both the administration and the Federal Reserve Board have become concerned," the economist said. "And this is why I believe the Fed is now determined to try and prevent short-term U.S. interest rates from declining any further."

Prices Gain Strongly on Wall St.

By Terry Robards NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (NYT).-A surge of buying in blue chips led prices to a strong gain in active trading on the New York Stock Exchange today.

The Dow Jones industrial average rocketed ahead 10.09 and closed at 922.70, within a fraction of the recovery high of 222.94 reached Feb. 16. Since the 1971 low recorded in November, the Dow has climbed nearly 125 points. Today's rally came on the heels of five drab sessions in which the market appeared to be churning simlessly in a consolidation phase, following the long post-Thanksgiving Day runup.

No specific news on the economic front was momentous enough to trigger the sudden in-flux of buying. Rather, the uptrend seemed to feed on itself, led by a jump of 6 1/2 in Du Pont, which closed at 164 3/4. The gain in the market value of the company's shares came to aggregate of more than $308 that Du Pont has developed but which is not yet ready for

How to gain the advantages of investment management for a $5,000 to $50,000 portfolio

If the money you have today is to grow in the infinre toward more income, or for education, travel, leisure, retirement, it must be kept working full time to achieve your goals.

Yet you may find that you are actually losing ground due to inflation, taxes or lack of time for investment decisions.

To help solve this problem, clients in 55 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management Plan. It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios of from $5,000 to $50,000—on behalf of people who recognize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year.

For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 10-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. Q-98.

volumes, Dr. Robert Coles, child psychiatrist, unintentionally introduces us to himself through the words of one John Ashley. an avowed political organizer working in a Midwestern city." Ashley is describing the crisis brought on in his wealthy West Virginia family by his decision not to follow his father and grandfather into a lucrative legal career, but to work instead with the poor of Appalachia, "My mother wanted to send mo to a psychiatrist in Knoxville . . . went three times to oblige her ... the psychiatrist kept asking me what my 'plans' were. and why I was so 'hostile' to 'my parents.' . . He said. Do you feel anger toward your father for not doing that kind of work ? . . .' If I'd said yes, he'd have been so happy, and if I'd have said no, no I'm not angry against my father, but against the whole society for the way it is set up, then the doctor would have though I was dodg-ing the issue and refusing to give the real, true answer. They've got a nice system, those psychiatrists: heads, I win; tails, you lose."

Dr. Coles agrees about "those psychiatrists." Like the pseudon-ymous John Ashley, he seems to question the pertinence of prerational Oedinal anger to ra-tional social outrage. Therefore, traditional psychoanalytic approaches must be abandoned, and instead of traveling the royal road to the unconscious, the doctor must explore the macrocosm of historical and social influences. If one troubled by a feeling of the injustice of things, one ought not to question the feeling, but look to the things.

That presumably is why Dr. Coles has traveled so long and so hard to understand the children of America's poor and powerless. That is why when he approached his subjects he tried to abandon all preconceived notions and go before them without the protection of theory or system.

That is why when he discusses the crayon drawings and watercolor paintings that imimpoverished children made him, he eschews discussion of latent content and adheres only to what the pictures reflect about the outer world. That is why when he sought to discover what had shaped the children's minds, he spoke not only to the parents, but also to the people who con-trolled the parents—the foremen who keep the tenant farmers in. line and the boss men who control the foremen; the crew leadwho ex the migrant workers and the fruit growers who bargain with crew leaders.

And that is why, whatever the ultimate purpose it serves, Dr. Coles's "Children in Crisis" series the first volume of which dealt with the stresses of desegregation on black and white children of the South; the sec-ond and third volumes of which now deal respectively with "migrants, sharecroppers, moun-

CROSSWORD PUZZLE

A LONG about halfway through taineers" and Southern families, the second of these two who have moved to the North; and the fourth volume of which will eventually cover Chicano, Indian and Eskimo childrenmust stand as some sort of monument in the history of psychiatry, Rarely have so many revealed so much to one man.

But what, one is forced to ask has been the purpose of Dr. Coles's explorations, other than to display his antimethodology? One asks because the two present volumes reveal so many things, pursue so many routes, imply so many possible responses and suggest so many different conclusions, that altogether they add up to nothing at all and leave the reader numbed and bewildered. Are the children of the poor sick, we want to know. Yes and no, Dr. Coles seems to be telling. us; they are sick and yet they are wonderfully resilient. Are they sick and wonderfully resilient because of or despite the system, it occurs to us to inquire. Yes and no: the system is terrible and yet there is no system. Were we wrong to have questions, to want implications, we begin to wonder. Yes, we were wrong; the implications are there for anyone sensitive enough to observe. The implications are terrifying; no generalizations are valid, Dr. Coles keeps repeating. Mind you, I do not wish to make light of the self-portraits or his accomplishment in doing so. The people in these pages speak openly, revealingly, mov-ingly—a thousand adverbs would not serve to do them justice. It is only that the message that keeps thrusting itself between their testimonies is so ambigu-ous: Pity these poor people, but don't demean them with your pity; they are uniquely dehumanized, no more than you or me; look beyond the stereotypes in your mind, but never forget the stereotypes you are looking beyond. Or as Dr. Coles puts it in one innocent-looking but typically revealing sentence: "Sharecropper children can make their parents amile and laugh." (Just consider the ambiguity there: What are "sharecropper children," if one oughtn't to generalize; why shouldn't they "make their parents single and laugh" if they are such miracles of resiliency?)

that Dr. Coles has captured here.

It is no wonder that several reviewers (in Time magazine and The Sunday Times Book Review, for instance) have read into Dr. Coles's books such contradictory conclusions: That America is in better shape than we thought and that the country is worse off than we think. Dr. Coles's studies are as inconclusive as a Rorschach test. The only overwhelming conclusion that one can safely draw is that Dr. Coles. like John Ashley the political organizer, is in revolt against the conventions of psychiatry. No doubt it is an honorable revolt; perhaps it is even a necessary one; I only question whether a reader has to travel so far to apprehend tt.

Berhard Russi of Switzerland won the men's downbill, clock-ing 85.97 eeconds to 86.84 for Mike Laferty of the United States. Russi moved up to sixth in the World Cup standings, but the order of the top competitors was not changed. World Cup leader Jean-Noël Augert of France is not competing here because there are no sislom events for the men, and has gone on to Heavenly Valley, Calif., where next week's racing will be held. Third-place Andrzej Bachieds of Poland is passing up the meet for the same reasons, and second-place Henri Duvillard of France insisted out of the top 10 today. Miss Proell covered the 1.2-mile course with a drop of 1,900 feet in 92.82 seconds. Switzerland's Marte-Thérèse Madig, a double gold-medalist at the Sapporo Winter Clympics, and Wiltrud Drexel of Anstris tied for second with a time of 93.09 seconds.

Miss Procil, who had the No. 12 starting position, said she was "very satisfied" with her run. "I had some trouble at the top, particularly in the tight turn." Bernadette Zurbriggen of Switzerland was fourth in 93.28 seconds, and Isabelle Mir of France took fifth with a time of 94.26. Sixth place was taken by Susan Corrock of the United States in 95.18. A men's and women's downmill is scheduled here for to-morrow, with a women's sistem set for Sunday.

Schenk Is Seeking Sprint Skate Title

FEKTISTUNA, Sweden, Feb. 25 (Reuters) — Dutchman Ard Schenk, the triple Olympic gold medalist who won his third straight speed-skating world championship last week, is one of the favorites in the first official World Sprint championship which opens here tomorrow. The 28-year-old is one of the few great long-distance skaters who ulso is a top-class sprinter.

Olympic champion and women's world-record holder in the 500, Anne Henning of Northbrook, Ill., is not entered. Olympian Diane Holum of Northbrook is considered a threat to defending champlon Ruth Schleiermacher of East Germany and Russia's Ludmilla Titova.

An 'Exhausted' Mrs. King Loses, Quits Tennis Tour

By Mark Asher WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (WP) .- Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., still fetigued following her greatest year of tennis, lost to Julie Heldman, 3-6, 6-4, 6-1, last night in the first round of the Virginia Silms of Washington tournament.

Sike practically gave the 26-year-old Miss Heldman of New York City the final set, stormed out of an interview because a reporter she wanted to exclude would not leave, and then announced through a Virginia Slims spokesman she was taking a vacation. "Mrs. King has withdrawn from the doubles here and from next week's tournament at Birmingham, Mich," the spokesman said. "She chooses not to risk further possible damage to her big toe."

The spokesmen quoted Mrs.
King as saying "I am mentally and physically exhausted.
I can't play my best."

Capsule Comment

"She doesn't miss too much," was a capsule comment by Karen Krantzeke, a tall, hard-hitting Australian, of her 6-3, 6-2 climination by Miss Evert in Miss Evert's first indoor

Earlier in the week, Mrs. When she won 19 tournaments and more than $117,000, the first woman athlete to reach the $100,000 plateau in one season. She noted now exhausted and out of shape she is now.

"I can't stand to keep losing. I can't take it. But I can't make excuses in my position." she said about a 6-1, 6-0 loss to Miss Evert in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and elimination by Dutch-woman Betty Stove in the quarterfinals at Oklahoma City two

She noted how much Rod Laver's two-month vecation had done in rejuvenating the world's top tennis player. But her dominant role in making the second year of the Virginia Slims tour a success has kept her from taking a rest.

An Analysis

In last night's match, Miss Heldman, a tennis writer herself and daughter of tour organizer Gladys Heldman, offered this

"She won the first set. I won the second and on a silver platter she gave me the third. I am appreciative. She didn't want to win the third set. I don't think she was trying to win." In other matches, a lesser-known 17-year-old, Barbers Downs of California upset Judy Dalton of Australia, 6-1, 6-1 and Nancy Richey Gunter of San Angelo, Texas, blasted Australia's Helen Gourlay, 6-0, 6-2.

"I didn't miss a thing," said littler after his seven-under-par round in this richest event on the pro circuit gave him a two-stroke edge. Three times he recovered from bunkers to get pars, and at eight greens he needed but one putt.

Bruce Crampton of Australia

was in the runner-up spot over the 7,128-yard course at 67 after carding a 32 on the front pine. Bob Smith, a former California amateur champion, B. R. (Mac) McClendon and Forrest Feder, a 22-year-old rookie from San Jose, Calif. were in with 68 each. Arnold Palmer had a 74, Lee Trevino took 76, Gary Player shot a par 72, and Jack Nicklaus shot a 78 after taking 40 to the turn. He began with a double-bogsy 6 after being bunkered twice, then followed with a 7 at the second hold after driving out of Although Littler led the first round of the Andy Williams-San Diego Open with 2 68, his 65 yearterday was his best of the year. In addition to his eight oneputt greens, he chipped in twice for birdles. He used only 24 putts.

England-France Rugby

PARIS, Peb. 35 (AP),-England meets France here tomorrow at Colombes Stadium in a Five Nations Rugby Union match. Both teams have 0-2 won-lost records, conference's athletic directors held a hearing to uphold com-missioner Wayne Duke's ban, made after a two-day investiga-The ban sidelined Ron Behagen and Marvin (Corky) Taylor for a fight that curtailed a Jan. 25 game against Ohio State and sent three Buckeye players to the The court ruling has led to a meeting of the conference's ath-letic directors yesterday, and the executive session, which ran more than eight hours, promised a deci-Testimony of Both Sides

Larson ruled that unless the athletic directors heard testimony from both sides, with Taylor and Behagen present, the players' rights to "due process of law" will have been violated.

Larson denied Tuesday that the Behagen-Taylor case represents a landmark. But lawyers here discount the judge's modesty and say he broke new ground by giving athletes a status protected by the Constitution, even though the players did not gain the immediate injunction they sought against the syspension.

Eleven years ago, a federal court in Alabama held that the dueprocess clause of the 14th Amendment requires that a student receive a hearing before he could be expelled from a state institution. Since then, other federal courts have firmly established the doctrine that a student is entitled to a hearing before severe punishment, because education is an interest" of substantial im-Dortance.

Due Process Larson attached this doe process to sports, saying:

"The opportunity to participate in intercollegiate athletics is of substantial economic value to many students. In these days when juniors in college are able to suspend their formal educational training in exchange for multi-million-dellar contracts to turn professional... to many, the chance to display their athletic prowess in college stadiums and arenas... is worth more in economic terms than the chance to get a college education.

Although Larsen told the Big Ten that its loose procedures should be "remedied without delay," he said commissioner Duke has power to suspend players, pending a hearing, under a regulation that says Duke should "promote the general welfare" of the conference.

But Larson further said that, if continued too long, "pre-ventive" becomes "punitive." So he ruled that, if no hearing was hald by today on whether the suspension should continue, he would hold the Big Ten as violating the players' due process of

Richey Defeats Orantes

In Third Round Of N.Y. Tennis

By Thomas Rogers NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (NYT). Even though he played what he characterized as "erratic tennis," Clif Richey of Sarasota, Fla., was good enough last night to hait a string of successes by Spanish players yesterday in the Clean Air tournament.

Richey railled from a 3-4 deficit in the third set to beat Manuel Orantes of Spain, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, in one of five third-round men's singles matches. Spaniards Andres Gimeno and

Juan Gisbert advanced to the quarterfinal round with victories earlier in the day. Gimeno, seeded fifth, topped Omy Paran of New Zealand, 4-8, 8-2, 6-2, and Gisbert defeated Pierre Berthès of France, 7-8, 4-8, 6-3. Tile Nastase of Romania, seeded second, breezed to a 6-1, 6-1, triumph over Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., a 20-year-old student at Trinity (Texas) Jim Connors of Belleville, Ill., gained the last quarterfinal berth with a 6-4, 6-1 victory over Gerald Battrick of England.

"That's a match I could have lost," said Richey, who broke Orantes's service six times, one more time than he lost his ser-vice to the 23-year-old how many bricks it takes to build a brick teahouse. One can't help projecting into the future, when Mao Tse-tung makes his first visit to the United States and his activities are beamed back via satellite to the people of China:

"Good evening comrades—this is Wo Pang of the Anti-Imperialist Television Network Broedcasting System, bringing to you live and in red color the banquet that President Nixon is giving in honor of our beloved and venerated leader, Chairman Mao, and his beloved and venerated wife, Madame Mao.

"Ba-ba-rah, what do you make of all of this so far?"

"Wo, the thing that impressed me the most was the reception the American people gave our beloved Mao. I was told by my interpreter that no one had received such a reception in Washington since Mayor John Lindsay joined the Democratic party. The people seem very pleased to see Chairman Mao."

"Did you see many school children waving to Chairman

Mao?"

"No. I didn't, but the interpreter told me that was because most of the children go to school on buses and it's hard to see them waving. Wo, what impressed you the most so far about this

"I think the thing that impressed me the most is that the U. S. Marine band had managed to learn the Chinese national anthem. I believe this is a very good sign for future Chinese-American relations, They're start-

"I have the menu right here in front of me. The first dish is fruit cocktail, which is supposed to be an American delicacy.

"It is, Ba-ba-rah. I had some for breakfast, and I can assure our Chinese viewers it is very delicious. Our beloved Mao is now eating his fruit salad with a spoon." "Yes, Wo. Chairman Mao and Madame Mao have been practicing for months with a spoon and fork and knife. They both seem to be handling them very well," "Quite well, Ba-ba-rah. Chairman Mao looks very much at ease. Who is that he is speaking to next to him?"

"My interpreter says that is Graham, a minister who Billy the second-most-important man in the administration. The man speaking to Madame Mao is Bebe Rebozo, a friend of President Nixon's who is the thirdmost-important man in the administration."

"Chairman Mao is now talking to a woman. Who is she?" "That is Martha Mitchell who is considered the most important woman in the administration." "Billy Graham seems to be handing pamphlets to Chairman Mao. What do you suppose they

"I don't know, Wo, but my interpreter says he believes Mr. Graham may be trying to persuade Chairman Mao to become a Christian." "Now Bebe Rebozo is handing pamphlets to Madame Mao. What do they say?"

"My interpreter says that Bebe Rebozo is probably trying to sell Madame Mao some Florida real estate."

"Who are those people who have just come out on the stage, Ba-ba-rah?" "They are the American entertainers. They are called the Ray Coniff singers. One of the women is pulling a sign out of her bosom. Is that unusual?"

"Oh, no, Wo. My interpreter informs me it is always done when somebody entertains at the White House."

ESTORIL FOR SUN AND

fondon W.L. 18th; part with a 4148. (It pays to deal with a established firm.)

The 'French Connection' Cop

PARIS (IHT).—For some years, in quite a few movies, Gene Hackman has been reliable, excellent even, and anonymous. "Two always had this problem of putting the name and face together," Hackman himself says.

The face is pleasant, ordinary and largely shrouded by a newish moustache. Now that Heckman's name and face have triumphantly come together in "The French Connection" he has, foolishly perhaps but very sympathetically, decided to hide behind his ginger cowcatcher. "I guess it was kind of perverse of me to grow it just now," he says shyly.

Gene Hackman, whose nomination for the best-actor Oscar was announced this week and who was in Paris on a "French Connection" promotion tour, was raised in the Midwest and began slowly on television, "playing cops and robbers and priests," and on Broadway.

"I never had much anxiety or hope," he says. "I'd just go from role to role, I never projected myself in any real situa-tion, which may be what saved me from going bananas while walting 10 or 15 years.

'Lackadaisical'

"It's hard to look back in retrospect over your career. Once I've done something I tend to forget it. If you asked me to tell you all the things I've done, I couldn't, I've always been lacksdaisical about my career, I figured I could do things and take the money and no one would see them."

The one recent role that fired up Hackman was played by Donald Sutherland in "Klute." "I really wanted to do that, It's the only picture in the last five years I really wanted to do." He approached "The French Connection" without much emotion while director William Friedkin approached Hackman with frank distrust: "I didn't want him," Friedkin says, "He'd been making so many pictures I didn't think he cared."

He did, and as "Popeye" Doyle, a brutal cop based on reallife gangbuster Eddie Egan, Gene Hackman gave a slam-bang performance. "The real guy and what I contributed get mixed up in my head," Hackman says. "I don't think it matters." It doesn't: As "Popeye," Hackman is very real, though he hated some of the lines he had to say:

"I had a line, Never trust a nigger.' It worried me. I don't use that word. But if you're honest as an actor you can't Hackman has already had two Academy nominations: for his Buck Barrow in "Bonnie and Clyde" and for "I Never Sang for My Father," a Broadway transplant. But with "The French Connection" has in the commercial big time and he has no intention of pulling a George C. Scott and disassoniating himself from the Oscar scramble.

The Town

"I think the Oscars are a part of the business. I would like it if it was just a little supper, but the movie business being what it is, a giant, I guess that's how it has to be."

Right now, Gene Hackman says frankly, "I am very interested in my career." This is why he agreed to do the three-month publicity tour for "The French Connection," which has taken him from TV talk shows ("I never have a lot to say on those dumb things") to London. "The only thing I saw was Westminster Abbey. We drove past it. My wife went to Parliament and met a baroness."

The publicity he's getting should, Hackman reasons, give him a little leverage in the film business. "You have more chance of longevity if you have a little juice, if you have some-thing going for you. I'm not interested in power as such, but the business is constructed in such a way that if you want to do what's good for you, you have to be in a position of command. I guess that's power of sorts."

He knows he is not a star type. "I know I'm not a personality who can slide through a part," he says. "I have to approach things from the character level. I can't do it from a circle and say at that point I want to do this. I generally start by asking myself how I'm different from this character. Then the easier thing, how I'm like him. In the two is the germ of how it works. "If you can make the character fit, the audience feels it, they have insight. The basis of every characterization is honesty. I could never do an outlandish character. Dusty [Dustin Hoffman] works very much on an external level where he does, for lack of a better word, shticks. I'm not putting him down, we're friends, he uses the word himself. I don't have that kind of facility." Interested as he is in longevity in films, Gene Hackman has a penchant toward directing that he's putting off for a while. Right now he is being sent lots of scripts—"but," he says candidly, "I suspect they've been around for a while."

He may next do a film for Fox in which he will be actorproducer. "It's a project they saw eight or nine months ago and didn't like," he says. "Then The French Connection' came out and they changed their minds." He laughs, but there isn't a hint of hitterness behind his laugh, or moustache,
